Wrong Is Righted

For Humphreys and Thompson

By Supreme Court

A. S. Humphreys and Frank E. Thompson were readmitted to the practice of law by the Supreme Court this morning. The order of disbarment against Mr. Humphreys was revoked and the order of suspension for one year against Thompson was also revoked.

Neither of the attorneys was called to the bar. Both sat in the seats they occupied when the order of disbarment was pronounced last August. No questions were asked. No word was said by anybody except the Chief Justice.

Chief Justice Frear said: "In the matter of the applications of A. S. Humphreys and F. E. Thompson, the court grants the relief asked and reinstates the applicants, relieving them from any further operation of the orders of this court of suspension and disbarment."

"The court wishes to refer particularly with approval to the good conduct of both the applicants since the order of disbarment and suspension were entered against them."

When the Chief Justice had concluded both Mr. Thompson and Mr. Humphreys left the court room.

The reinstatement of the two lawyers this morning was the outcome of a conference between them and the Chief Justice yesterday at noon. Chief Justice Frear invited Mr. Humphreys and Mr. Thompson to call at his chambers at that hour. They presented themselves and were asked by the Chief Justice to make application for reinstatement. The intimation was made that if they would do so the court would act favorably upon their applications.

The application of A. S. Humphreys simply stated that he desired to be admitted to the practice of law; that he had been engaged in the active practice of law since eighteen years of age; that he had spent large sums of money in securing his legal education and had invested upwards of $5000 in the purchase of law books, and that since his disbarment, he had strictly conformed to the order of the court.

Lisiansky Japanese

Were On

Verge of Starvation

When the revenue cutter Thetis anchored in the stream this morning after her cruise to Laysan, Lisiansky and Midway Island, the early-rising waterfronters were surprised to see scores of Japanese heads bobbing over her rail. Stories as to their identity were immediately rife. Some said that the men were shipwrecked sailors, while others would have it that the Japanese were captured bird-catchers. They were neither; being simply Japanese bird-catchers who were marooned on Lisiansky Island and who were very glad to be able to leave the island on board the Thetis.

The Thetis arrived at Lisiansky Island June 16. She was supposed to go there as a terror to the Japanese bird-catchers there, but, as it turned out, she came as a great relief to them. When the Thetis anchored off the island, Captain Hamlet and several other officers immediately went ashore. They found seventy-seven Japanese on the island. They had erected four shacks which they used as store houses and sleeping quarters. About 100 cases of dried bird skins had been put up ready for shipment.

The Japanese told Captain Hamlet a hard-luck story. They had come to Lisiansky in the schooner Tiyo Maru. The schooner had sailed for Japan in February with the understanding that she should return immediately for the purpose of bringing the Japanese who remained on the island and their bird skins back to Japan. The Tiyo Maru had been in a very unseaworthy condition when she left and as it was now long past the time when she had been expected to return the unfortunate people on the island entertained grave fears that they had been marooned.

The men were on the verge of starvation when the Thetis arrived. They had only six hundred pounds of rice and forty pounds of beans left of their provisions. This scanty supply would last such a large number of men but a very short time. The Japanese had already for some time past been making preparations to meet the starvation which was staring them in the face. For a month prior to the arrival of the Thetis they had not stuffed any skins but had been devoting all their time to drying the breasts of black terns for the purpose of using that as food when their other provisions gave out. They had prepared quite a quantity of these breasts when the Thetis came.

The Japanese were overjoyed when they found that they could leave the island in the Thetis. They had to leave behind their bird skins, about 100 cases of them, but they readily did so. The Thetis had but scanty accommodation for so large a crowd of men and the Japanese had to sleep on deck under awnings all the way to Honolulu. They will be given in charge of the immigration authorities here until (Continued on Page 4.)

REMOVAL HERE

Acting U. S. District Attorney J. J. Dunne received a cablegram from the U. S. Marshal at San Francisco today stating that Kerr, under arrest for assaulting one Ramos on the transport Buford and breaking his jaw, is fighting removal to Hawaii and asked that evidence be forwarded by the Sierra. The Sierra having sailed, the matter of extraditing the assailant of Ramos will be delayed.

YOKOHAMA

MANY DAYS AGO

The local revenue authorities have not as yet decided what they will do with the seventy-seven Japanese bird-catchers whom the revenue cutter Thetis brought back from Lisiansky Island this morning. It was at first thought best that they be delivered into the hands of the Immigration Station authorities for them to hold until the Japanese Consul arranged transportation to Japan for the men. Later on it was decided to cable to the Treasury Department in Washington for definite instructions in the matter. An answer is expected to arrive from Washington tomorrow.

It seems that the bird catchers need not have been in such a desperate hurry to leave Lisiansky after all. It appears that their schooner must have been near at hand at the time they left. The Japanese consulate reported the matter to Japan and this afternoon received a answer stating that the Toyu Maru, the schooner which was to have fetched the bird catchers, had left Yokohama for Lisiansky Island twenty-three days ago. It is about 2500 miles from Yokohama to Lisiansky. Figuring that the schooner ought to be able to make at least a hundred miles a day the schooner should have reached the island now or should at least do so in the near future.

NEVEDAN ARRIVES

AT VERY

FAVORABLE TIME

General Freight Agent C. Percy Morse of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. this morning received a cablegram stating that the steamship Nevedan arrived at New York from the Islands this morning.

"The Nevedan certainly strikes the market at a very favorable time," said Mr. Morse this morning. "She has on board 5,300 tons of Hawaiian sugar; of this 1,000 tons belongs to the Makae Sugar Company on Kauai. The balance 4,300 tons, belongs to Alexander & Baldwin. It comes from Kahuku plantation on this island and from Hawaiian Commercial and other plantations on Maui. If sugar is at present selling on the Coast at 3.99 cents a pound, as stated by a cablegram received here yesterday, the cargo has gone up in value considerably since it left Hawaii. If it sells at 3.99 the whole cargo will be worth a total of $422,940. Sugar rising to 3.99 from the previous quotation of 3.86 cents per pound will mean an additional profit of 13 points. The shippers of the cargo will benefit by this rise, realizing by it $13,780 more than they would have at the old quotation."
